

FROM THE EDITOR

Reports of Practical Oncology and Radiotherapy has entered its fourth year of publication. I am happy to announce that the editorial board has expanded by the inclusion of three new members from Scotland, France and Belgium. Their supervision and concern should bring benefit in the form of a higher scientific standard of our articles. The Board of the Polish Society of Radiation Oncology has also decided to enable us to publish certain articles in Polish to fulfill the statutory rules of the Society, and thus expose the Journal to all Polish researchers and clinicians.

We have lost a lot with the death of Professor Ramlau, member of our Board and Head of the Oncology Clinic. He was deeply devoted to clinical work, teaching and research.

The first Congress of the Polish Society of Radiation Oncology will be held in Kraków in May 1999. This Society branched off from the Polish Oncological Society only a year ago, and now is continuing his independent life.
